Due to our limited number of Crath Carpathian English (or Persian) Walnut nursery trees, we are not issuing a new catalogue this year.

The trees we now have, are of the same original stock that we sold for the Rev. Paul C. Crath of Canada from 1937 to 1943 when his supply of seed nuts was cut off by the Iron Curtain. Many of these seedlings have now come into bearing and have been under our close observation in central and western New York for several years. We have taken our grafts and seed nuts from the very best of these considering good bearing, hardiness and the size and quality of the nuts. It is our observation that these English walnuts from selected stock come more nearly true from seed than is the case with fruit trees.

While a considerable proportion of these trees are self-pollinating, better crops are assured if more than one tree is planted.

We have never had much success in transplanting large walnut trees. In our experience the younger trees stand transplanting better and are likely to overtake and pass the larger ones set at the same time. One year we transplanted six hundred with a loss of only eight.

We have a limited supply of filberts.

These are from an original hybrid, selected for resistance to filbert blight as well as hardiness, size and flavor of kernel. This hybrid is a result of many years of crossing and a final selection from more than a thousand trees.

Shipments made either by express or parcel post F. O. B., Ithaca, New York.

Trees are 2-3 years old and 18 to 24 inches in height.
